INTERIM REPORT ON CLEP

By Dean James R. Jose

The implementation of the College Level Examination Program (CLEP) approved by the Faculty in January 1971 has begun in earnest. Only a small number of the present freshman class took advantage of the regional testing center administrations prior to enrolling at Lycoming. The College received score reports for seven students, four earned credit.

This small percentage of entering freshmen participating in regional administrations prior to enrolling at Lycoming may be explained by a number of factors, including adoption of CLEP late in the admissions year schedule. In addition, there appeared to be a lack of understanding on the nature and possibilities of the program, even though each student who was admitted received a letter in February explaining the particulars of CLEP including application procedures for the regional administrations. Beginning immediately, we intend to provide prospective students, parents, and guidance counsellors with a more complete explanation of CLEP, in order to alleviate this problem and increase the number of students taking CLEP examinations prior to enrollment at Lycoming.

On September 7, the entering freshman class participated in a campus administration of CLEP, the purpose of which was to begin collecting data for the establishment of local norms. Each student participating was administered two examinations, which were determined according to a random selection method in order to have an unbiased sample. A similar campus administration is planned for the freshman class which will enter in September of 1972.

The College has already begun an educational program on CLEP with high school guidance counsellors, prospective students, and parents. Currently enrolled students will shortly receive a report on the implementation of CLEP to date, as well as information on how they might take advantage of the program. Application materials for regional testing administrations in which currently enrolled students may participate are available through the Registrar.

While a more detailed report on CLEP implementation at Lycoming will be forthcoming when the data has been assembled and analyzed (probably late November), I am pleased to present this interim report.

By Bruce L. Swanger

When is a freshman not a freshman at an institution of higher learning?

A difficult question for most, but Andrew C. Stack, a 1971 graduate of Williamsport High School, will answer, without hesitation, that it is when a student has taken and passed enough College Level Examination Program (CLEP) exams to give him adequate freshman credits to enter college with sophomore status.

And Andy should know! Upon enrolling at Lycoming in September as a first-year student, he became the first "freshman" in the history of the school to begin as a sophomore. The path young Stack took is not easy, and none but outstanding high school seniors could probably do it. But it is extremely rewarding to advanced or superior students whose academic knowledge makes it possible for them to use CLEP exams to expedite earning a college degree.

Andy graduated Number Two in a class of 675 last spring. Thus, he was a prime candidate to be one of the first to receive college credits through the newly inaugurated CLEP program at Lycoming.

CLEP is a relatively new concept in American education being offered for the first time this year at Lycoming. It provides an opportunity for students to earn college credits through examinations which test for knowledge; students are normally expected to acquire at Lycoming but which they may have acquired prior to enrollment in college. Through evaluation of performance on these examinations, the college hopes to place students at their level of competence thus individualizing the learning experience. Students no longer need to enroll in and complete courses, the substance of which they have mastered.

However, the CLEP exams are not restricted to present high school and college students. Adults who have not been attending organized classes but have been acquiring non-traditional learning outside the classroom may also receive college credit through CLEP.

Andy passed, with flying colors, all five CLEP General Examinations to satisfy the entire college distribution requirements. He received credit for two courses each in English, fine arts, mathematics, natural sciences, and history and social sciences. He also passed the Chemistry Subject Examination for two additional credits.

Although Andy was the only first-year student to reach sophomore status through the CLEP exams, eighty-six additional students successfully passed enough exams to earn from two to six course credits toward a degree. The figures include fifty-six who earned two, twenty-nine passed two of the General Examinations to earn four credits, and one student received six credits.

In enrolling at Lycoming, Andy follows in the footsteps of a number of outstanding Williamsport High School graduates who completed degree requirements at the city institution at the top of their graduation classes.

Although Andy was at the top of his class at W. H. S., he didn't spend all his time "cracking" the books. He was active in various school groups, including publications, the Boy Scouts, the Key Club, and was on the executive board of the student council. Enrolled as a Lycoming Scholar, Andy may take an interdisciplinary major in mathematics/physics. He hopes to become a math teacher or enter government service.

NATIONAL COALITION OF CHURCH-RELATED SCHOOLS JOINED

Lycoming has joined with 101 other colleges affiliated with the United Methodist Church in a precedent-shattering program to confront some of their common problems and jointly capitalize on their greater potential as a force in higher education.

President Harold H. Hutson recently announced the participation of Lycoming in the national program designed to overcome the lack of understanding and financial insecurity confronting church-related institutions of higher education.

The program, unanimously approved by the president or representative of eighty-two colleges and twenty junior colleges meeting in Washington, is intended to (1) reinvigorate the educational mission of church-related schools on the development of human values and societal needs; (2) attract additional students whose aspirations coincide with these new goals for a more humane educational experience; and (3) raise $400,000,000 in new, unrestricted funds over a three-to-five year period beginning in January, 1973.

PEP BAND GREATLY APPRECIATED

Through the efforts of Dodge Heller, 54, a twenty-eight piece pep band played at the Homecoming Game.

Several alumni brought their instruments and joined members of the College Concert Band in providing football music in the home stands. They did a great job! We hope to hear more of them in the future.

Thanks, Dodge, Dr. Morgan for helping with arrangements, and everyone who played!

TENNIS TOURNAMENT AT HOMECOMING

Steve Frank '64 headed the tennis tournament played on Friday afternoon of Homecoming Weekend.

Although there were only a few alumni entered, the tournament was enjoyed. The trophies awarded at halftime at Saturday's football game went to Bill Hupers '70. Perhaps more tennis players will be able to participate next year.

GOLFERS ENJOYED PERFECT WEATHER

Twenty-one golfers—alumni, faculty, and students—enjoyed a perfect fall day at the White Deer Golf Course on Homecoming Weekend. The "Best Golfer Trophy" went to Al Cloback '67 for his low gross score of 79. Others with low gross scores who deserve honorable mention are Bruce Katz '67, Charlie Mitter '67, Ed Camp '67, Bruce Swearingen—director of public relations—and Jim Dwyler '72. Keep your clubs ready for alumni weekend at the Williamsport Country Club.

ALUMNI SOCCER MEN LOOK GOOD

Men's sports held their own at Lycoming during Homecoming. Although soccer is not a challenging sport in our cold weather, the Lycoming men's team did well. Although they did not play a full game, their first split the alumni record by a 2-1 score. A large number of former players are members of the 800 and 1000 members of the Soccer Association.

The fall regatta competition was a success. It helped that the weather was just what we needed. Saturday morning of Homecoming Weekend. The boat race also enjoyed the festive spirit. Keep in Cape Cod and Mt. Vernon in the "Dead End" Next Phillips University is a complete and help.

ENROLLMENT FALL, 1971

48 PART-TIME
1,587 FULL-TIME
1,635 TOTAL
1,604 EQUATED FULL-TIME

In a year when many colleges are short of their projected enrollments, four new enrollment records have been established at Lycoming this September according to figures released by Robert J. Glunk, registrar.

Bob notes that the record 969 men and record 666 women together establish new highs of 1,635 individual students and 1,604 equated full-time students. In the fall of 1970 the figures were 949 men, 641 women, 1,590 full-time students, and 1,542 equated full-time students, with gains of 2.1 percent, 1.4 percent, 2.5 percent, and 4.0 percent respectively.

In the eleven years since 1960 the total enrollment at Lycoming has increased by 639, a growth of sixty-four percent. The on-campus population gained 562 residents for a ninety-seven percent gain, while the number of off-campus students rose by seventy-seven, up eighteen and a half percent. The coeds on campus outgained the men 348 to 291, which is one hundred nine percent to forty-three percent.

LYCOMING COUNTY

In September 1971 the number of Lycoming County students attending Lycoming College increased for the first time in more than ten years. In the fall of 1969 the number of Lycoming County students was down from the fall of 1968 by 18.3%. Last fall the decline had decreased to only 6.5%. This fall the number of home county students is up 5.4%.

Two factors account for this reversal. The number of male from Lycoming County is up for the second year in a row. This fall's 90% gain follows last fall's 50% increase which had reversed a decline of 20% the previous year. The accelerating decline in the number of females from Lycoming County stopped this fall with only one less in attendance than last fall. The rate of decline had grown from 2.8% in 1968 (1,164) to 1.98% and to 2.22% in 1970.

REMAINING COUNTIES

Another reversal in trends came in the number of students from other Pennsylvania counties. Whereas in fall 1970 saw an increase of 14%, fall 1971 saw a 44% decrease in other county students. The twenty-five fewer students represent seventeen less men (-4.9%) and eight less women (-3.5%).

Geographically, the major shifts in enrollment occurred to the east of Williamsport in the southeast to Pennsylvania counties: Philadelphia, Chester, and Bradford County. In the nine counties east of Lycoming County a gain of nine students in 1970 over 1969 has been reversed into a decrease of twenty-five students in 1971 from 1970. The increase Philadelphia area is a first in its long pattern of change. An increase of eight students in Bucks County is offset by a decline of eight in Montgomery County. Again of three in Chester County is balanced by a loss of three in Delaware County. Philadelphia County, which declined by four in 1970, increased by thirteen in 1971. Bradford County reversed a four-tenths decline in 1970 into an eleven student gain in 1971. Small gains and losses in the remaining counties tended to balance slightly to the loss in

OTHER STATES

Twenty-nine states, the District of Columbia, and four foreign countries are represented this year. The two leading states after Pennsylvania's 864 students are New Jersey with 436 and New York with 185. Maryland sends thirty-seven, Connecticut thirty-six, Virginia eighteen, and Massachusetts thirteen. The remaining states have from one to nine students.

Two foreign students come from Germany and one each from Canada, France, and Saudi Arabia.

The fifty-seven additional students from other states in 1971 repeats last fall's 5% rate of increase which had reversed a slight decline of .6% in 1969.

The 412 males are twenty-three above last year which is a 6% increase. The 354 females are thirty-four above last fall for a 10.5% increase.

WILL YOUR WILL BE YOUR WILL?

Don't Worry About Your Will! The state—wherever you live—has taken care of that unpleasant little matter for you—if you haven't.

But, of course, the state in all its wisdom may not handle your estate as you would prefer. How is the state to know if you don't tell it?

Various surveys show that over half of all adult Americans who die have not written their wills. Many others who have legal wills have not updated them for years; circumstances change and wills should be reviewed periodically to determine if a new will or a codicil (an addition) is in order.

You can let the state decide who your estate's executor will be and how your estate will be disposed of—all you have to do is nothing! But one thing will be certain: no charitable institution—church, college, hospital, etc.—will receive any part of your estate. All of it will go to your relatives (close or distant) and to the state. If you have no relatives—the state takes all.

Only you can prevent the state from writing your will—consult your attorney and make the important decisions yourself!

REGISTRATION INCREASES

Over 300 alumni returned to the campus for the weekend of October 5th and 9th. This represents a sizable increase over any year in recent history.

Steve Buckley '66, homecoming committee chairman reported, "Everyone seemed very happy with the new style program which our Alumni Executive Board adopted." It certainly offered a variety of events for each alumnus to attend, and they did take advantage of this fact.

The alumni luncheon at the football field prior to the game proved very popular, as it enabled alumni to greet and talk with fellow alumni without being rushed to move from the dining room to the game. The Pennsylvania Dutch chicken-corn-soup made by Tom Springman '65 was really outstanding.

Dan Fultz '57, Alumni Association president, remarked that, "The floats this year were the finest I have ever seen at a Lyon Homecoming." The judges must have had a difficult time determining the winners as each float showed imagination, careful planning and execution. The theme, "A Journey Down Sesame Street" proved to be a popular one. The Sesame Street songs sounded over the public address system as the eight lovely queens and their escorts rode around the field in open convertibles. Michelle Amaden '74, representing Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, was crowned Homecoming Queen by Mitzu Benusing '72, the 1970 Queen. First place in the float competition went to Kappa Delta Bho Fraternity with second and third place awards going to Alpha Phi Omega and the Choir respectively.

OX ROAST POPULAR AGAIN

Leta Chi Fraternity and The Alumni Association again sponsored the Ox Roast run by Sam Kepner of Muncy. The 625 pound steer turned slowly on the spit for nearly eight hours before serving time at noon on Saturday. The 200 pounds of roasts done in the hot coals pit were ready for sandwiches about 2 p.m. on Homecoming, having cooked mid-ground since the midnight before.

Over 2,000 delicious sandwiches were sold by the frat unity brothers and their dates, along with countless cups of soft drinks and coffee. Again, it was an outstanding example of cooperation from the "Cooks." Thanks to you men and your ladies.

THE MAILBAG

Editor, Lycoming

Dear Joe

Now that I am back on campus I would like to explain a few things about the Amish articles in the Spring issue of the Lycoming.

As you know, I sent 100 copies of this issue to friends of mine. They've sent mostly to fellow anthropologists, but I sent a few to Amish families, and also several to Quakers, inasmuch as Quakers and the Amish were contrasted in the shorter article.

In getting for receiving them, I have had a lot of comments and a few criticisms, some of the latter of which I would like to share with readers of the magazine by way of clarification of some assertions I made in the Spring issue.

Although the Amish in general do not like to be written about, and in spite of the fact that most Amish, especially in the summer months, are free to write letters, I have had a few responses from the Amish themselves. Most of these say that the articles "tell the truth," by which they mean that they are factually accurate, which is able to do as enthusiastic as they allow the media to do concerning material written about them.

They were, however, critical in two ways. Several of them did not like the reference to their buying articles of clothing in "English stores." It is true that most of them do not buy ready-made articles of clothing; they buy the plain material at these stores, from which they make their shirts, dresses,

CAMPUS NOTES

JACK S. McCRAWY, professor of sociology and anthropology, was awarded a National Science Foundation Grant last summer and studied Mass Political Communication at Ohio University from June 21 to July 24.

LORINE B. PRIEST, professor of history, has accepted an invitation by the Irish University Press to write the introduction to the Indian Affairs section of a compilation of documents in American economic history from the founding of the Federal Union to the Civil War. At Washington, D. C. in June, Dr. Priest chaired the session on Civilization and Acculturation at the National Archives Conference on Research in the History of Indian-White Relations.

Dr. Priest was general chairman of the local arrangement committee of the 40th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Historical Society which was jointly sponsored by Lycoming College and the Lycoming County Historical Society. They met at the College October 22 and 23.

JOHN F. PIER, JR., assistant professor of history, published a long article, "The Spirit Movement," in the summer issue of Breal.

ROGER D. SHIPLEY, assistant professor of art, has been named chairman of the department. Roger came to Lycoming in 1967 after earning his master's of fine arts from the Cranbrook Academy of Art in 1967 with a major in painting a minor in graphics, and studies in sculpture and photography. The native of Cleveland Heights, Ohio had earned his bachelor of arts, with an art major and French minor, from Otterbein College in 1964. He spent the 1964-65 academic year studying painting and sculpture at the Cleveland Institute of Art. The summer of 1962 he studied painting and graphics at the American School at Fontainebleau, France.

LOUISE B. SCHAFFER, assistant professor of education, has been appointed chairman of the department, succeeding John J. Zimmerman who started the new academic year as superintendent of the Montoursville School District. Dr. Schaeffer has been at Lycoming since 1962. Louise, a 1959 Lycoming graduate, earned a master's of arts in elementary education at Bucknell University in 1963. The Williamsport native had extensive experience teaching elementary grades in South Williamsport, Oakland California, and Lovelock Township before returning to Lycoming.

and other garments. This is what I meant to say, but I am afraid that I said it some what awkwardly to be strictly accurate.

There are, however, articles of clothing they no longer make themselves, such as hats and shoes which they now buy ready-made. Hager's Department Store in Lancaster has had a plain clothes department for several years, in which they sell men's suits, work shirts, underwear, socks, and hats, also women's shoes, stockings, and even "prayer caps." The plain clothes people buy these articles, we English do not do so. Such articles of clothing as well as plain cloth by the yard, are also advertised in "The Budget" newspaper, which most Amish families subscribe to and read. Excepting for Menoments, few English people read "The Budget." Its readers and the customers for the plain apparel advertisers are Amish people, not all of whom, of course, are Amish.

A still more serious criticism, coming from members of plain churches, relates to the article "Our Neighbors and Brothers—The Amish." I have had some complaints that the article is incomplete because it does not mention all of the basic beliefs of the Amish and Amish-Mennonites. It is true that it does not deal with all of their beliefs and it did not try to do so. It was written merely as an outline of some of the basic beliefs of these people and to answer it I selected the particular beliefs I thought most important and which I intended to deal in my beliefs to come. This is what I intended to do in the essay, and I am surprised that a reader thought it was a list of all of the beliefs of the plain people.

Several other readers noticed that I referred to the Quaker Meeting as a church, and wondered why I had put the word in quotation marks. This is because most Quakers in the eastern part of the United States do not refer to their meetings as congregations as a church. They use the word "meetinghouse" for the building, the word "Meeting" refers both to the congregational group and to the worship service. And western Friends call the building a church, and the group a congregation, but Eastern Friends ordinarily do not do so. My wife will always say, "Is she going to Meeting on First Day?" she will never say, "Are you going to church on Sunday?" Indeed, it is possible for Friends to distinguish among groups of Friends by the words they use in their speech.

I received only one Quaker criticism of the article on Quakers and Amish beliefs. This is a minor criticism but an interesting one. One Friend said the article was too long, cluttered, and diffuse. Some Friends are noted for their blunt criticism of each other—a practice which at least is contrast with the Quaker's intention to tell the truth and nothing but the truth in all occasions. "Why did they not skip all the unnecessary words?" he said.

My answer is that the article uses the form of a dialogue, and dialogue is usually more words than is usual in writing. As an editor of the Quaker plain language, I felt was somewhat profusely wordy. Which reminds me of an old Quaker saying: "The sins of an old-time Friend will all be made plain to him by the Holy Spirit." I was a bit of a sinner, he said that I had said "I am" and "is" that should as well as "he" and "she".

On the whole, I am glad you read and criticized my article. Marion A. Mook, Professor of Anthropology
